THE GRAIN 100

- The Grain 100 consists of the top multiple facility grain companies and cooperatives in North America according to total corporate grain storage capacity. (Ninety four multiple facility companies with more than 6.5 million bushels storage are listed in this section.)
- Statistics for individual facilities are listed by state in the Port, River, Terminal and Subterminal section.
- Because country elevator numbers are included, the total number of facilities and the total corporate grain storage capacity figures may not necessarily be the sum of individual facility listings in the Port, River, Terminal and Subterminal section.
- Conversions of tonnes to bushels are approximates.
- Throughout the directory, leased facilities are listed under the company which currently operates the elevator with lessors designated in parentheses.
- Facilities owned by a consortium of more than two are not credited to any individual member.
- Because of their significant grain storage capacity, flour mills are included and are listed as terminals.
- City or company names in parentheses following an individual facility location are for clarification purposes when referring to the Port, River, Terminal and Subterminal section. If the company has more than one facility in a city, the number follows in parentheses.

U.S. GRAIN STORAGE CAPACITY

Total grain storage capacity, including both on-farm and off-farm elevators and warehouses, totaled 21,505,440,000 bus on Dec. 1, 1990, down 3% from 22,184,430,000 bus a year earlier. According to the National Agricultural Statistics Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, on-farm capacity dropped 400 million bus in 1990 while commercial grain storage capacity fell almost 279 million bus.

Off-farm commercial storage capacity totaled 9,105,440,000 bus on Dec. 1, down 3% from 9,384,430,000 bus a year earlier.

Commercial grain storage in the five hard winter states of the Southwest — Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado and Nebraska — totaled 3,007,510,000 bus on Dec. 1, down 80,930,000 bus, or 3%, from 3,088,440,000 bus the year before. Area elevators accounted for 33% of all off-farm storage capacity.

In the five Central states — Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri and Ohio — off-farm storage was 2,373,430,000 bus, down 20,020,000, or 1%, from 2,393,450,000 in 1989. Area storage represented 26% of the U.S. total. In the spring wheat states — Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota and South Dakota — storage capacity totaled 981,310,000 bus, down 42,080,000 bus, or 4%, from 1,023,390,000 bus in 1989. The area's commercial storage accounted for 11% of all U.S. off-farm capacity.

Storage capacity in the Pacific Northwest — Idaho, Oregon and Washington — totaled 673,650,000 bus, down 16,950,000 bus, or 2%, from 690,600,000 bus the year before. Pacific Northwest storage was equal to 7% of all U.S. commercial storage capacity.

Of the 40 states plus New England tracked by U.S.D.A., 31 showed decreases and 10 showed increases in commercial farm capacity in 1990. Largest decreases were sustained in Iowa, off 88,890,000 bus; Nebraska, off 40,530,000 bus; Minnesota, 34,060,000 bus, and Kansas, 32,750,000 bus. The largest increase, 12 million bus, was in Illinois.

In posting that increase, Illinois cushioned its lead as the state with the largest commercial grain storage capacity. At 1,211,700,000 bus, Illinois storage capacity was 200,570,000 bus greater than Iowa, at 1,011,130,000 bus. Iowa was followed by Texas, at 924,300,000 bus; Kansas, at 891,990,000 bus; and Nebraska, 802,430,000 bus. The leading five states accounted for 53% of the nation's off-farm storage capacity on Dec. 1.

Total number of off-farm storage facilities was 13,225 on Dec. 1, down 292, or 2%, from the year before. Illinois had the largest number of storage facilities, at 1,310, followed by Kansas at 942.

Estimated on-farm storage capacity, based on the results of an N.A.S.S. survey, totaled 12,400 million bus, down 3% from 12,800 million bus in 1989.

In the four spring wheat states, on-farm grain storage capacity totaled 3,180 million bus, down 40 million bus, or 1%, from 3,220 million bus a year earlier. A decrease of 70 million bus in Minnesota was offset partially by 10-million-bus increases in the three other states. The area's storage capacity represented 26% of all on-farm storage in the U.S.

In the five hard winter states of the Southwest, on-farm storage totaled 2,100 million bus, down 100 million bus, or 5%, from 2,200 million bus in 1989. The largest change from the year before was in Nebraska, by far the largest on-farm storage state in the Southwest. At 1,120 million bus, farm storage in Nebraska was down 100 million bus, or 8%, from the year before. The Southwest's farm storage accounted for 17% of the U.S. total.

Storage capacity on-farm in the Central states totaled 2,930 million bus, down 170 million bus, or 5%, from 3,100 million bus the year before. Area capacity equaled 24% of all U.S. farm storage.

Iowa was the leading state in on-farm storage. At 1,900 million bus, Iowa's farm storage capacity was down 100 million bus, or 5%, from 2,000 million bus in 1989. Second in farm storage capacity was Minnesota, at 1,400 million bus, down 70 million bus, or 5%, from 1,470 million bus a year earlier. Illinois was the third leading state for on-farm storage. At 1,150 million bus, capacity was down 100 million bus, or 8%, from 1989.

WE HANDLE YOUR GRAIN WITH KID GLOVES

When you use the Houston Public Elevator, you'll discover the advantages of cultivating good business.

Offering over 600 storage bins that provide the capacity for handling more than 6.5 million bushels, the Port of Houston's modern facilities can load multi-grain cargo on a single vessel at a single berth . . . and shipments are never commingled.

These features, coupled with our food-grain mineral oil application to all inbound grain, assure your shipments of being virtually dust-free when loaded on the vessel.

You can count on the Port of Houston for quick turnaround because of our experienced personnel and "new" rail-car handling system.

For fast, clean service with a personal touch, schedule your grain handling through the Port of Houston.
